A black and white photograph of a busy airport terminal. The image shows a large, open space with a high ceiling supported by a complex network of steel trusses. In the foreground, a large crowd of people is walking, some carrying luggage. In the background, there are check-in counters, baggage claim carousels, and various signs, including one for 'Esmach'. A large purple text box is overlaid on the right side of the image, containing white text.

StaCU's primary aim is to ensure Prevent is being delivered properly within a direction set by ministers following the Independent Review of Prevent.

StaCU is a distinct entity housed within the Commission for Countering Extremism.

StaCU provides a clear path for complaints about delivery of Prevent from both practitioners and members of the public.

Complaints can be reported to www.gov.uk/guidance/make-a-complaint-about-prevent from 28th February and users can communicate with StaCU via email once they have submitted a complaint.

StaCU is committed to publishing publicly accessible reports into complaints data and trends annually.

Ministers can also task StaCU to conduct specific investigations into potential failings to uphold the Prevent Duty.
